Sunnyside Miracle

Thinking Saint Joseph School would close its doors for the final time, third-grader Emilee Trimble wrote her name in the shaving cream she used to clean her desk. A local Washington newspaper had reported that "only a miracle" would keep her school open. That's exactly what happened when the District of San Francisco turned its Lasallian ideals into action by responding to the educational needs of a small farmworker community. (See story on page 18)
